plan to move products out of factories in China and deliver to designated door in the US.

For frequent shipments from multiple origin locations to multiple destinations, we will recommend suitable database supply chain system to manage the logistics.

Logistics operation of oversea sourcing involves many parties externally and internally. Externally, the logistics operations involve shipper, consignee, origin forwarder, origin broker, origin trucker, ocean or air carriers, destination forwarder, destination broker, destination trucker. Internally, from a consignee's perspective for instance, the operations would involve purchasing department, transportation department (domestic and international), warehouses, and accounting department (paying vendors and other service provider to get the shipment released).

Logistics database system is able to bring all parties in the supply chain on the same platform, either through system integration or the use of customized web forms. As the result, shipments are closely tracked and managed in real-time. The processes from party to party are streamlined.
